

MidWeek

Readers Reach Deep For Japan

May 25, 2011

By Midweek Staff

Readers Reach Deep For Japan

Star-Advertiser president and publisher Dennis Francis (right) and Star-Advertiser senior vice president of sales and marketing Dave Kennedy present a check for $50,000 to Coralie Matayoshi, CEO of the American Red Cross Hawaii Chapter, for Japanese tsunami relief. All donations were submitted by Star-Advertiser readers and subscribers. "I want to thank the thousands of Star-Advertiser subscribers who gave so generously to help our friends in Japan," says Francis.

A Memorial Groundbreaking

Hawaii Law Enforcement Memorial Foundation, dedicated to fallen officers killed in the line of duty, broke ground on Capitol District land May 16. The event kicked off last week's Police Week. Pictured from left are Debbie Luna, Sidney Kayakawa, Kathy Kealoha, Kuuhaku Park, Joan Gribbin-Aiu, Tommy Aiu and Tommy Cayetano.

The Martial Art of Generosity

The Traditional Taekwondo Center of Honolulu raised $2,500 for the Hawaii Meth Project. Pictured are Jennifer Phakoom, program manager of the Hawaii Meth Project, and Sahbumnim David Ippen, international taekwondo master and fourth degree black belt of the Traditional Taekwondo Center of Honolulu. Photo courtesy of Hawaii Meth Project.

Find this article at: http://www.midweek.com/contentreaders_reach_deep_for_japan/